

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for operating driver information systems in a motor vehicle. The object of the present invention is to provide a method for operating driver information systems in a motor vehicle and a device for carrying out a method via which increased driving safety may be obtained. This objective is achieved in that the information to be output to the driver is selected as a function of vehicle operating data.